Mrs. Martha West Drowns Herself in the River.

Constantly Maltreated by Her Husband-Other Happenings Across Rock Creek.

Mrs. Martha West, a thin, pale-faced little woman about forty years of age, committed suicide by drowning this morning. She jumped into the Potomac near Ten nev's mill. Georgetown, about 8 o'clock, sank, came up and sank again. Geo. War ren of the schooner Clytie, lying near, saw her then, and attempted a rescue. Before he could accomplish anything, however, the woman went down for the last time. The body was recovered a few moment later and carried to the shore. Restoratives were applied and all resuscitating methods adopted, but only a gasp or two rewarded the workers, and death quickly followed. The patrol was summoned and the body was taken to the seventh pre cinct morgue.

She Left a Sad Letter. The suicide was the wife of Alexander

West, who resides on the Canal road, just west of the Aqueduct bridge. It was a deliberate suicide, as evidenced by the following letter, found at the woman's home by a small son, and turned over to Officer Augustus Brown:

"For Willie West:
"Good-bye to all. I am going to the river-going to leave all of you forever. I river—going to leave all of you forever. I am tired of life. Take care of my dear children. Life is no good to me. The river is my purpose. Take care of Howard for my sake. Farewell, I will never see your face again. In the river you will find me."

A family unpleasantness was aired in the police court this morning and attracted quite a number of curious people, but they were cleared out of the court room before that trial came up. Geo. Wood charged his brother Carlie with having made an assault on him with a knife in one hand and a brick in the other. It is alleged that Carlie, who is nearly blind, and his wife are being constantly taunted by George and his family for being poor and having to accept alms at times. Carlle and family naturally feel sore about it and yesterday, it is charged, George's wife wrote her sister-in-law a rather uncomplimentary letter and shortly afterward they came together. Some one rushed in and told Carlie that George had struck his wife, and Carlie rushed to the rescue with the knife and brick, but did not use either of them. After hearing the evidence Jus-tice Thompson fined Mr. and Mrs. Carlie Wood St. 1982b. Wood $1 each.
